PROHIBITION FADING OUT.

It becomes more evident with each passing day that the cause of constitutional prohibition is gradually fading out. Its only real hope in the past was based on the prospective disruption of the republican party. That hope was ruthlessly and forever blasted by the result of the last national election, when the party of practical principles, of high license and of patriotism was restored to power by a voice so emphatic that its thunderous tones have nearly drowned the prohibition yell.—State Journal.

It is hardly any wonder that indications point to the decline of the prohibition movement. Two things have brought about the situation wherein it appears that "prohibition is fading out." In the first place, the third party movement has been pushed forward by men of reckless judgment, whose cry was prohibition or free whisky. This was too radical and too one-sided to gain the confidence and support of a majority of the temperance people of the country. And in addition to this, these reckless leaders have been too malignant in their attacks on the republican party. They have proceeded on the principle that the way to get a man's vote was to knock him down with a club; or, that to secure his friendship he must be slandered. Neither vote nor friendship is obtained in that way. Their spirit of hate of the republican party, and especially of prominent republican temperance workers, has done much to injure the prohibition movement.

In the second place, there does not seem to be a public sentiment sufficiently strong to enforce prohibition, not even in Maine, nor in Kansas, nor in Iowa. Prohibition in Maine has been on the statute books more than thirty years, and yet the law is openly violated in many cities of the state. This condition of things exists also in Kansas, in Iowa, in New Hampshire, and in Rhode Island. This should not be, but we are confronted with it nevertheless, and it does much to shake the confidence of the public in prohibition movement.

There is another thing which argues against the present spirit and purpose of the prohibition party. The Wisconsin Prohibitionist, the organ of the third party in this state, has changed its name to the "Northwestern Mail." Why was this done? The Wisconsin Prohibitionist is a witness against itself. It assigns as a reason for this change of name, that there is a popular prejudice against the name "prohibitionist." Why this popular prejudice? Simply because the policy of the third party has been extremely narrow and nothing less than contemptible. Frances Willard, John P. St. John, Professor Dixie, John M. Olin, Samuel D. Hastings, the Rev. Dr. Funk, and that class of third party leaders, have created this popular prejudice against prohibition. They have been unanimous in calling everybody who did not agree with their narrow opinions, as most cowards and slaves to the whisky power. When a party so conducts itself that its true enemies are a majority of the christian people of the country, its high time to abandon the name. It teaches a lesson from which the third party should gain considerable wisdom.

The Presbyterian general assembly in New York has adopted the following resolution:—
Resolved, That we heartily reiterate the deliverance of former assemblies upon this whole subject, and express our warm sympathy with the widespread popular movement now in progress in favor of the complete suppression of the traffic in intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and we bid all wise and proper methods to secure this issue a hearty God-speed.

This is a very judicious and timely resolution. Were this the spirit of all temperance people, the work of temperance reform would make more rapid progress.

TRAINING FOR THE RACE.
There is no doubt that the purpose of Mr. Cleveland is to begin early in training for the presidential race in '92. He evidently wants the nomination, and if he says he will get it, whatever he wants he must have. He is in a condition to dictate to the five and a half million democrats in this country.

The New York dinner was given for a purpose. It gave Mr. Cleveland an opportunity to speak his mind, and to keep himself on good terms with the leaders, or rather his trainers. The democratic journals of the national metropolis, remarks that "loyalty and for the sake of the permanent good of the democratic party, we wish that three hundred and fifty thousand democrats, instead of only three hundred and fifty, could meet Mr. Cleveland at the Fifth Avenue hotel to-night, and study him during the dinner and listen to whatever remarks he may have prepared for the occasion. The more conspicuously and frequently he appears at the gatherings and in the councils of the party the less danger there is of forgetting the great lesson of 1888. To keep Mr. Cleveland's personality in sight, and the memory of his career as a politician and a party leader, is a benefit, not a misfortune."

This is a pretty severe reflection on Mr. Cleveland as a party leader, but it may be justified in view of the great lesson of 1888. But it is doubtful if Mr. Cleveland can force the entire democratic party into line. The ex-president intimated that it would be proper to stride a little the next time on the tariff question so as to admit into the democratic party the Randall and the San protectionists, but this attempt will meet with failure. The people demand a square fight, and plainly defined issues. Any other policy will suffer the fate of the democratic party last year.

The present condition of things in the democratic party impresses upon one's mind the fact that the party is poverty stricken as to presidential timber. It has only one man it can run for the presidency.

The state board of supervision has bought some good coal at cheap prices. Contracts have been awarded as follows: State hospital, Mendota, 2,200 tons of Indiana block to K. B. Brockenbrough & Co., Chicago, $3.35 per ton; 300 tons of Youngbush gas coal, H. M. Benjamin, Milwaukee, $4.58. Northern hospital, 3,000 tons of Hocking lump, A. T. Thatcher, Chicago, at $3.64; 300 tons of gas coal, H. M. Benjamin, at $3.98. School for Deaf, 800 tons of Hocking lump, Ohio Coal Exchange, Chicago, at $3.36. School for the Blind, 315 tons of anthracite, Blair & Gandy, Janesville, at $6.09, delivered. Industrial School for Boys, 700 tons of Hocking lump, A. T. Thatcher, Chicago, at $3.14; 250 tons of anthracite, Gaspar & Le Clear, Waukegan, $5.25. State prison, 1,000 tons of New Kentucky lump, Walker, Whitehead & Co., Chicago, $3.40. State public school, Sparta, 300 tons of anthracite coal, W. H. H. Macdon, Janesville $6.55. The quantity purchased aggregates 9,065 tons.

In his speech at the Cleveland dinner, Governor Hill talked just as virtuous as Mr. Cleveland. But the New York Times decided this part of his speech, "readable about reform" while it rapaciously applauds similar utterances of Mr. Cleveland. Why this unjust discrimination?—Milwaukee Sentinel.

That is the way the mugwumps have of being independent. When Cleveland set the political gullotine at work taking off the official heads of thousands of faithful and efficient republicans, the mugwumps said Cleveland was a reformer. When Harrison dispensed offensive democrats and fills their places with competent republicans, the mugwumps call this machine politics. Verily, the independent press is a queer creature.

It is pretty hard work for democrats to stand up for ballot reform. In the Connecticut senate all the democrats except one voted against the ballot reform bill, and all the republicans except one voted for it. These democratic senators do not want to abolish the methods which are time-honored in the democratic party and therefore voted against reform.

The seven by nine editors who thought they saw the cash box of the state empty are bewildered because all the current expenses of the state are being paid without question or delay. Editors of that caliber will always find much in human life to give them the dyspepsia.

The Atlanta Constitution, in a moment when sound reason enters the editorial room, says that there is no excuse for so much lawlessness in the south-west. This is a rebuke to the democratic politics in the south.

During the six years since it was first thrown open to the public the Brooklyn bridge has been traversed by over one hundred and forty-six millions of people—an average of almost twenty-five millions a year.

Mr. Cleveland is beginning his campaign pretty early in the season. But a man who has a hard job before him needs to begin early.

AFTER THE RAILROADS.
Iowa's Governor Wants Information Regarding Freight Rates.
DES MOINES, Iowa, May 31.—Gov. Larrabee is evidently preparing to again go getting for the railroads. His office has just been supplied with a large batch of printed circulars which are being sent to the shippers of the State propounding a series of six questions for them to answer. They are as follows: 1. How do the local freight rates on the railroads patronized by you compare with the rates in force two years ago? 2. Are the present rates satisfactory to the shippers of your locality? 3. If they are not satisfactory state in what respect the present tariff is deemed deficient or unjust. 4. Has the passenger service in your locality deteriorated, and if so, to what extent? 5. Are you in favor of State control of railroads? 6. What railroad legislation, if any, would you recommend for the future?

ANOTHER ARREST MADE.

ONE MORE OF THE CRONIN SUSPECTS IN CUSTODY.

Thought to Be the Man Who Drove the Doctor to His Doom—Cronin's Editorials on Le Caron, the Spy.

CHICAGO, May 31.—The police have made an important arrest. It is possible, indeed, very probable, that the man who drove the white horse from Dinan's livery stable to Dr. Cronin's home is now in custody.

About 2 o'clock in the morning the police and detectives surrounded the Liberty Bell lodging house on Desplaines street. A careful search was made through all of the rooms, halls, and closets of the place for the suspected man, but he had taken the alarm and secreted himself. He eluded the officers for a long time, and by doubling back around halls that had been searched, managed to secrete himself in a closet. He came out of his hiding place just as the search was over and when the officers were leaving the building. By the merest accident he was met in one of the halls and captured.

The man came to the lodging house May 2 and registered as "Mack." That, however, was an assumed name. His true name is Williams. The morning of May 5 he came to the office of the lodging house and made most minute inquiries as to the date of his arrival there as shown by the books. It was supposed that he feared some mistake might be made that would cause him to pay for an extra week's lodging. When that portion of his inquiry had been satisfactorily answered he asked what time he had returned the night before—the night of May 4. He was told that he came in at 12:10 o'clock. Evidently he did not like the answer that he received, for he tried to argue the clerk into believing that he had retired several hours earlier.

Williams seemed to be ill at ease and troubled about something. He referred to the subject several times that day and evening, said that he had next Monday night in Montgomery Hall the crime and its authors will be officially denounced. The league is against the deed, and it would be glad to assist in any way the police in their search for the murderers if it had any information. I am in a position to know positively that the murder of Dr. Cronin was not committed with the consent or knowledge of the Clan-na-Gael association in Chicago. The crime was the result of a local feud and a personal grudge. The man was killed by personal enemies, who acted on private feelings."

For several days he was absent-minded, and a man whose mind was intensely occupied upon some one subject to the exclusion of all others. He never talked with the men who congregated in the office or smoking rooms, and apparently had no acquaintances with the exception of one man who left the lodging house three days ago. This man was often engaged with Williams in private conversation, and it is supposed knows more about him than any other person.

Williams is about 35 years old and of a dark complexion. He is a small man, about 5 feet 6 inches tall, and of wiry frame. He has dark, wavy hair, and in every way answers the description of a man who Detective Coughlin sent to Dinan's stable for the white horse.

The arrest of Williams was kept a profound secret by the police. He is now hidden in some police station where he cannot be found.

It will be remembered that the men who ran the estate where Dr. Cronin was murdered said they were brothers, and that their name was Williams. What connection this Williams had with them has not yet been clearly established.

CRONIN VERSUS LE CARON.

The Doctor in His Paper Denounces the British Spy.

CHICAGO, May 31.—The murder of Dr. Cronin, with its attendant horrors, together with the veil of mystery which shrouds the conspiracy, receive an added melancholy interest with the public writings of the murdered man are brought to light. Dr. Cronin owed his death primarily to the fact that his persistence and energy gave him a position as a public agitator on Irish questions and a leader for to the cause of the Irish in the light of the ghastly tragedy which has forever silenced Dr. Cronin's caustic pen and ringing voice his later published utterances are of peculiar interest. They afford a insight into the man's loyalty to the Irish cause, his energy of purpose and denunciation of treason.

About six months ago Dr. Cronin, in company with Messrs O'Keefe, Ahern, Mortimer Scanlan, and several other Irishmen, established in Chicago a weekly paper called the Colto-American. Dr. Cronin assumed the position of editor, which he held up to the time of his death. The files of the Colto-American are therefore an interesting record of one phase of the victim's career.

His editorials are in the main devoted to the political aspect of the Irish cause, and show a familiarity with events both in the old world and the new. His references to dissensions in the ranks of Irish societies are mostly clothed in temperate language, although their frequent recurrence proves that the author's writing was often inspired by the development of his independent investigations.

But the most significant feature in a perusal of these writings is the light thrown on Dr. Cronin's relations with Le Caron, the informer and British spy. In every line referring to Le Caron is a refutation of the charge that Dr. Cronin and Le Caron were friends. There is not a word of defense of the spy; nothing but contempt and loathing expressed in the editor's most vigorous English.

Le Caron Denounced.
Feb. 9, 1889, Le Caron, the informer and spy, receives the compliments of the Colto-American as follows:—
"The Times must be in straits for evidence when it fishes up Dr. Le Caron's, alias Beach's, yarns. It is known that there is no Irish nationalist would trust the man here, and when recently he tried to enter the Catholic Forerunners an Irish court preferably he was balked by those who knew his game. If there be such an organization as he mentions now in existence, it is safe to say Dr. Beach-Le Caron-swear-big would be kept on the outside; another proof is that some more recent events would be sworn to by him in his bargain and sale. The story, if true, puts Parrell high in the estimation of honest lovers of motherland. Indeed, we believe the Irish chieftain will not shrink if Le Caron's yarns should be discovered any; then he takes the military oath of Penzance, only to betray the honest men who trusted him, then, as he claims, he takes the obligation of the Clan-na-Gael organization, which only saved from destruction, as he shows, by the 'split'; for, as he could not 'serve two masters' (he served the devil and one other master well, he stuck by one 'side,' of course, taking any other cash demanded by it. Then he looms up as the trusted friend and confidant of Parrell, Egan, Dillon, Finerty, Devoy and others whose confidences he prepares for us English readers, all the while regularly drawing his remittance through the Braidwood postoffice. The time for his public rehearsal being ripe, he tells his story scintillatingly and poses as a 'military spy' in the service of his country. We wonder what the world would think if some one else in the service of his 'country' would confess to his confessed perjury and 'motto to him 'in a military way' the penalty of spying? Perhaps the much rejected extradition treaty was framed to help out such smooth villains as Beach-LeCaron. Sam Weller's advice. 'Beware of the vipers,' might, paraphrased, read: 'Beware of smooth fellows who have little to but patriotism to live on.' England may be supplying the needful thing to support his 'bill of rights.'"

P. O. Sullivan's House Searched.

The persistence of the police in seeking to discover the clothes and instruments of Dr. Cronin would seem to imply that in their opinion the discovery of these articles is a matter of great importance. The unavailing search of the day previous was renewed yesterday. The house of P. O. Sullivan, the ice-man, was searched from cellar to garret. No search warrant was taken out, but the Whalens, who are now in possession of the premises, were asked yesterday morning if they were willing to have the officers go through the house and outbuildings, and their reply was that they would be more than willing that a search should be made, inasmuch as it would tend to free them from a certain form of suspicion.

Leut. Spangler and five of the Lake View police force entered the Sullivan house about 10:30 o'clock and remained about the premises for considerable time. Nothing whatever of a suspicious nature was found and nothing was carried away. The officers were very reticent about telling just what was done, but Capt. Schaeck and Leut. Schuttler both affirmed that the search had proved a failure, but neither was willing to say that the case was no further along that it was the day before.

HOSTON CLAN-NA-GAEL MEN.

Declaring Cronin's Murder to Have Resulted from a Personal Grudge.

Boston, Mass., May 31.—Boston members of the Clan-na-Gael association vigorously repudiated the suggestion that Dr. Cronin's murder in Chicago was committed under instructions from or with the approval of the order from the stigma attached to it. Daniel P. Sullivan, the President of the municipal council of the Irish National League in this city said today: "At a meeting to be held next Monday night in Montgomery Hall the crime and its authors will be officially denounced. The league is against the deed, and it would be glad to assist in any way the police in their search for the murderers if it had any information. I am in a position to know positively that the murder of Dr. Cronin was not committed with the consent or knowledge of the Clan-na-Gael association in Chicago. The crime was the result of a local feud and a personal grudge. The man was killed by personal enemies, who acted on private feelings."

HUNTING EVIDENCE IN NEBRASKA.

A Detective Making Investigations in Lincoln—Fitzgerald Has No Theory.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 31.—A Pinkerton man, who has been in the city several days, left this morning. He was looking up evidence to connect the Irish societies in this city in some way with the death of Dr. Cronin. John Fitzgerald and John P. Sutton, president and secretary of the Irish National League, were interviewed on the subject. They declared they had no personal acquaintance with Cronin, and knew of him as an Irish agitator. They had no theory to advance concerning his death, but refuted the idea that any Irish society was responsible for it. Bishop Donaghy did not desire to say anything further than to concur heartily in the words of Bishop Ryan on the subject.

Starkey Makes Denial.

TORONTO, Ont., May 31.—J. W. Starkey, the lawyer who fled from Chicago to this city some time ago to escape prosecution for tampering with a jury, and who has been accused of complicity with C. J. Long in the perpetration of dispatches about Long's alleged interview with Dr. Cronin, visited the newspaper offices this morning, and said he arrived in the city only yesterday after a month's visit in New York. He declared that he had absolutely no dealings with Long and had no knowledge of the Cronin case.

NATHAN CORWITH DEAD.

The One-Time Millionaire Succumbs to a Lingering Illness.

CHICAGO, May 31.—Nathan Corwith, for many years one of the most widely known citizens of Chicago, died Wednesday night at his home on Michigan avenue, after a lingering illness. Affections of the heart and liver sealed his death. Mr. Corwith, who had engaged largely in trade and banking at Galena in 1840, came to Chicago in 1864, and, with his brother, Henry Corwith, began to deal in lead. The firm at once took rank as a substantial and wealthy concern, and when Henry Corwith died he left an estate valued at $1,000,000. Nathan Corwith accumulated about $1,500,000 worth of property, and about three years ago he retired from business. Last July his son Gordon, who is a metal broker in New York, persuaded his father to embark his means in an effort to corner the market. In a few months the money was all gone, and an examination of the books showed that not a single pound of lead was sold by the firm. It is charged that Gordon Corwith squandered all of his father's wealth in speculation. At all events Nathan Corwith found himself without a dollar in the world. He leaves two sons, Nathan and Gordon, and a daughter, Mrs. M. D. Wells.
